

Philosophical Ponderings of a Farmer

Names (c) 2019

I got several comments about my farm name at last Saturday's farmers market. Apparently "Hopscotch" sticks in people's mind, which is exactly what I wanted it to do, while at the same time providing a little insight into my model of "jumping from plot to plot." It now seems like the natural choice, but it reminded me of how difficult it was to choose a name in the first place. The decision process turned into a bit of a frenzy, and all of a sudden everything became a potential name. Biting Cat Farm, Wheelbarrow Race Farm, and Kitchen Fork Farm were all on the list at one point. Fortunately I did have the foresight not to choose any of those :).
